10	SkillTally	SkillTally is an industry-agnostic online skill-assessment platform, in pursuit of bringing about a paradigm shift in the conventional use of skill-assessments. Very often skill-assessments are used as post-mortem tools, that result in labelling people – as incompetent, mediocre, or proficient - vis-à-vis a particular competency. At SkillTally, we go beyond labels and embed microlearning opportunities, in every skill-assessment. SkillTally's 'raison d'être', is to enable 'Skill-Building through Skill-Testing'. Therefore, at SkillTally 'testing' is not a one-time event, but tests are used repeatedly, to improve the relevant skill.	1. 41	Purple Quarter	Purple Quarter is a 3-year-old executive search firm based out of Bangalore. 3 years ago, our co-founders saw a massive gap in tech leadership search. They saw that tech hiring, at leadership levels, required specialization and understanding of both technology and leadership that no one in the country was offering. To gain this understanding, we met with over 500 technologists globally to comprehend how tech-leaders think, what drives them, the traits that distinguish them from other leaders, and so on. This understanding led us to develop our proprietary behavioral matrix, which has become our guide to match a company's requirement with the right tech leader. This experiment of specialization in tech leadership search seemed to work when we managed to place Ravi Krishnaswamy in InMobi, who replaced their founding CTO Mohit Saxena. We still carry the spirit of the story of our inception, always trying to understand the evolving nature of the tech landscape and meeting as many tech leaders as possible. This rigor in our search process has led us to work with top companies where we have made industry-changing moves.
